DISCUSSION

Friday, 19 June 2026

University of Lodz

Disinformation Discourse

VENUE: Aula A5, Faculty of Philology, University of Lodz, Pomorska St. 171/173, Łódź, Poland

THEME OUTLINE

Disinformation discourse consists in the deliberate practice of disseminating false information with the intention to deceive. Originating from random fake news spread online by individuals, nowadays it comprises all kinds of content of public interest, importance or urgency, from healthcare to environment to war, communicated by organized groups sponsored by various public-political or commercial principals. Using sophisticated techniques of propaganda and threat generation, disinformation discourse is difficult to counter, as it draws on the current construction of societies, their anxieties and fears, craftily exploiting cases of public distrust in officially circulated information. This roundtable brings together papers that explore disinformation discourse in terms of a) its conceptual underpinnings and linguistic structure; b) the public, political, and media domains in which it mostly often occurs and which it is likely to colonize in the future; c) methods in which can be efficiently researched and described. The desired outcome of the presentations and the following discussion is to:

- ➡ produce a comprehensive, cutting-edge account of the concept, origins, evolution and current domains of disinformation discourse;
- ➡ relate the phenomenon of disinformation discourse to central, urgent problems of modern societies, such as authority crisis, public anxiety, and growing distrust in official news content;
- ➡ outline interdisciplinary ways of researching disinformation discourse across its many domains and discursive manifestations, from healthcare, environment, and modern technology, to international conflict and war propaganda.
